LIBERTY CHOIR MEMBERS TOUR CONCENTRATION CAMP

EDITORS NOTE: Joe Vaughan, a member of the Liberty Youth Choir, visited the German concentration camp at Stutthof while the choir was on a concert tour of Poland. Joe has kindly agreed to share his experience with the readers of the Times-Virginian by writing the following article and submitting the accompanying photos.

As many already know, the Liberty Youth Singers, from Liberty Baptist Church, Appomattox, Virginia have recently returned from a three week concert-tour of Poland. While in Poland, one of their more fascinating sightseeing expeditions was a tour of the German Concentration Camp, Stutthof.

Here, in this camp, the Liberty Youth Singers walked through a large wooden gate, known to the prisoners as "The Gate of Death." Through this gate, 120,000 prisoners entered, of which 85,000 were executed in some cruel and heartless way.

The prisoners in this camp consisted mainly of Jews, Polish people, and gypsies. Together these people stayed in some of the most uncomfortable quarters possible. In some of the buildings there would be a room 10 X 20 in feet, where 250 people were packed. All that was on the floor was straw and burlap. The only way they got rest was for half to stand up and the other half to lay down. They weren't allowed out of the room to use the toilet, so the people used the floor and the walls.

Imagine 250 people eating and living under such painful and unsanitary conditions. It was very hard for all the prisoners, but indeed, so hard for some that they committed suicide. Many died of dyptheria and other diseases. Many were beaten to death on a large wooden log.

In other rooms there were bunk beds for the prisoners to sleep in, and the choir found these not at all like our bunk beds today. These beds were

School Bus Operator Retires After 44 Years

In 1930 a 22-year-old school bus driver made his first trip around the eastern end of Appomattox County picking up children and depositing them at the county schools.

In 1974 a 65-year-old school bus driver made his last run hauling grandchildren of the students who had made the first trip with him 44 years before.

Robert C. Beale retired as a bus driver following the 1973-74 school year after 44 years of service to Appomattox County as a school bus driver.

Beale's first trip as a fully accredited driver was in "an old Republic truck with a home made body." Beale remembers the truck, and the problems involved in contract hauling of school students nearly half a century ago.

"The truck ran on a magneto," Beale says, "There was no battery and you had to crank the thing by hand. I used to try to find a hill to park on so I could get the truck started by coasting instead of doing all that cranking in cold weather."

It wasn't until 1947 that the county started furnishing buses. Prior to that all the hauling was done on a contract basis with the contractor supplying his own equipment.

"My father was the bus driver before I took the job," Beale recalls, "He never drove an automobile. He used a covered wagon and a team of horses to get the kids to school. When we got the truck I took over the driving and I quit after last year because of the mandatory retirement age."

Lots of memories are built in 44 years of serving the youth of a community, and Beale, who is still active in community affairs, says, "I can't recall ever having a really bad passenger on my bus. Some of them were mischievious, but I don't believe any of them were bad."

Beale makes some comparisons of driving back in the 30s and driving today, "Well, the last eight or 10 years were the best. Road conditions are so much better now. A driver spends less time on the road, and they call school off on bad days, so in recent years driving has become much easier."

It was not always so. In 1932 Beale recollects moving down a dirt road with ruts "so deep the bus couldn't climb out," when he came upon a stalled car. "I told the driver to get in and start the engine and I would try to push him to a drier area. He

Town Council Had Lengthy Agenda

The Appomattox Town Council approved a $300.00 donation to the Bi-Centennial Commission, represented by Mrs. Aldah Gordon, at its monthly meeting Aug. 19.

In other action the council approved a request by John Simpson that he be granted permission to station two trailers on his property on Lee-Grant Avenue.

Progress reports from town manager William Slagle included: The installation of waterlines from Main Street to the vicinity of Route 460 is nearing completion; the fire siren has been installed; parking along Route 460 has been discontinued and a turning lane has been installed.

The right-of-way acquisition along Court Street is approximately 60 per cent complete. Once the town has gained all the right-of way the State Department of Highways can begin work on installing a new drainage system, sidewalks and guttering.

The council deferred action on a parking complaint along Lee Street near Main, and the Street Committee will study the situation before final action is taken.

Rick Shalley, a representative of Central Virginia Tomorrow - A Partnership Process presented the plans and background of the Process to members of council.

The council was informed that Governor Mills Godwin has been invited and has accepted an invitation to the Annual Historic Appomattox Railroad Festival scheduled for Oct. 12 and 13.

The town's share of a pro-rated cost of a consultant in negotiations with Virginia Electric and Power Company is $42.00.

In making the announcement Walton said, "We are very happy that citizens of Appomattox County have such a fine facility available to them. We hope that many of them will come out Sunday and take the opportunity to tour the new building."

Walton said that the school board and the building contractor had reached an agreement August 19 which would allow the school board to begin moving into the new building, although final acceptance of the building has not been effected.

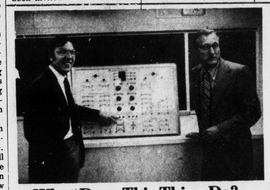
Employees of the school will be on hand to conduct tours of the new facility at Sunday's Open House.



What Does This Thing Do?

Chairman of the Appomattox County School Board, Berkley Drinkard, right, seems to be questioning the function of electronic testing device while board member, Dr. A. A. Fratrick points out dials on equipment located in vocational section of new Appomattox County High School. Board members toured new complex following meeting August 9.
